Lost in Woods—Was Killed—

There was considerable excitement in the hands of Mr. Thompson, one day last week.

One day last week when mysterious calls for help were heard. The call was heard from the mountain peak of "Rock curl", which is a wild and wooded country. Several people in the village were at once by the police and an ambulance was sent.

After a search in the direction from which the cry had been heard, it was thought to be the cry of some wild animal. In response to calls the cry was repeated and finally a party was organized to investigate.

the party returned empty handed and with no knowledge of what had been apparently calling for help. The first cry was believed to be from someone who had gone swimming in the creek at "Rock out", but when no one was located there, the

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

INNOVATION, INERTIA

NO NEW idea ever comes into this world peacefully. Its advent is always attended by bitter opposition. From the very beginning a new idea combats other, older ideas which have had time to become authoritative and powerful. And these older ideas, and the people who believe in them, do not intend to be pushed aside without a struggle.

One example of a new idea is Christianity. Not only its founder but thousands of other martyrs were sacrificed in "the struggle" to make this new conception prevail.

Its coming tarried other, older religions. And the backers of these religions were not willing to stand idly by and see their ideas swept away.

In our own time evolution has stirred up about as much opposition as any other new theory or idea. It is bitterly opposed by many persons who fear that its coming may destroy their own conceptions or beliefs.

These are examples of ideas of universal influence. Every day sees the birth of countless thousands of comparatively insignificant ones.

Let us see if the same rule holds in their case.

Suppose, you for example, are a file clerk in an office and devise a new and better way of filing data cards.

You tell your idea to your employer and stand by for his immediate approval. If he is like the average employer you will stand by for a considerable time.

He is very skeptical. The idea may be all right, but after all, the cards have been filed a certain way in the past and that way has been satisfactory. Why change it? Won't that be inviting trouble?

It is an even bet that the fellow will oppose you even though the success of your device cannot possibly harm him or jeopardize any of his major conceptions.

This sort of thing is called inertia. It is an inherent tendency to continue business in the same old way. And of course inertia is always antagonistic to innovation.

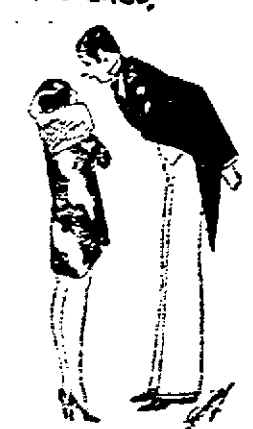

If a new idea is good enough and if it is pushed hard enough it will usually triumph over inertia. But the triumph is usually hard won.

Anticipating inertia is half the battle. If you expect to have people oppose your best ideas you will not become discouraged when the opposition shows itself. Rather, it will make you fight all the harder.

Just remember that if neither Christianity or evolution could make their way in the world without a battle, your own little pet idea could hardly expect to be more fortunate.

And remember, too, that the only way you can make your idea prevail is by pushing it and fighting for it.

Practical Summer Play
Suits for Youngsters

Pantalettes and Ship Ahoy are practical summer play suits, according to the Woman's Home Companion. Each suit is made in two pieces and the blouse is a pull-over to which the trousers are buttoned. The patch pocket of Pantalettes overflows with luscious embroidered strawberries and blossoms while Ship Ahoy wears on his most practical brigantine. Pantalettes also wears a cunning little shade hat made of her dress material. Long trousers invest chubby legs with quaint charm and also protect little knees from scratches and scrapes that often follow tumblers. Pantalettes would be picturesque in lemon-yellow cotton bound with white and embroidered in pink and green. Ship Ahoy might be blue denim with the simulated sailor collar in white stitching and the brigantine could be romantically colorful or white.

New Color Card Guide
Board, as Name Indicates

One of the cornerstones of fashion for next season has been laid. The standard color card is a guide board, as the name indicates. Hosiery will be dyed to match certain shades on that card; felt hats will be blended with the most popular color in favor for coats; small articles, such as thousands of bolts of wool, veils, silks and cottons, will be dyed by this guide for fall colors. Shoes also will take their hues from that source. The card is assembled by the color card association.

The card contains 122 colors, a most comprehensive collection of staple colors," said Mrs. Margaret Rorke, managing director of the association. "It represents the fruition of 13 years of wide experience and study of the color needs of America. The beauty and variety of the shades provides a lexicon of commercial colors which will be used in all branches of art, industry and trade. Every costume designer, every color specialist and every student of industrial art will consult it."

"Now that color is taking so important a place in our house decoration (table linen, towels, sheets, pillows, rugs, glassware and china, even floor boxes and pans are being produced in vivid colors); now that the color mode in gowns, slippers, hostess hats and various dainty accessories is occupying so prominent a place in fashion, a color chart such as that issued by our association is really of the greatest value to the consumer, the dealer and the manufacturer," Mrs. Rorke continued. "No housewife wants a riot of color—that is, if we are to have an abundance of colored objects, draperies and clothes we want the various tints to harmonize."

"The colors are grouped in distinct color families, all of which are arranged in harmonious relationship. Some of these families contain as many as eight tints and shades of one hue. Seventy-four colors from past season cards have been incorporated in the standard card because, by their popularity, they have now taken their place in the rank of staples."

Sleeves Go to Extremes to Prove They Are Smart

Sleeves sometimes go to extremes to prove their smartness. There are many interesting phases of new sleeves and diverse ways in which fullness is handled.

Coat sleeves, wide at the elbow, taper toward the wrist. This of help kasha has hands of tucked soft material. Jenny uses a full sleeve on a black satin afternoon coat that is very modern in feeling.

Full-trimmed cuffs such as tiers of short-haired fur and the bracelet cuff of fluffy fur are very much in vogue.

Dress sleeves are not forgotten in the movement toward greater elaboration. On their chiffon and lace afternoon frocks, sleeves, tight fitted to just above the elbow, join a long full ruffle or flounce sometimes circular and often gathered. The flared sleeve between elbow and wrist, left open with a tight cuff, is at its best on a street dress of heavy crepe.

Color of Sounds

Observations have proved that a considerable percentage of people unconsciously associate color with every sound they hear. Pleasing notes seem to go with soft, delicate shades. Some moderately high notes suggest gold, shrill ones, silver, and harsh notes seem to go with deep sounds.

Little Band-Wagon

(A 1928 Western Newspaper Union.)

26.—The Anti-Third Term
Tradition Upheld

ONLY twice in our history has the anti-third term tradition, established in the precedent set by President George Washington, been seriously challenged. Both times, though the challengers—Ulysses S. Grant and Theodore Roosevelt—were immensely popular figures, the force of the precedent overbore them.

In 1880 President Hayes was unavailable for renomination by the Republican party. His stand for civil service reform—sneeringly called "spoils service reform" by the spoilsmen—had alienated certain strong party leaders.

The time was ripe for a third term boom for former President Grant. For four years he had been out of office. The unfortunate scandals that came to light during his administration had been partly forgotten. He was coming into his own again in grateful remembrance of the North as the general who had saved the Union. Upon his return from a trip around the world in 1871, his journey across the United States was little short of a triumphal progress.

Grant's reasons for wanting a third term were variously attributed to the desire of his family for social prestige and to his own belief that his travels had given him a wider knowledge of the world that would fit him to be a more capable executive.

His transiency of managers, Senators J. D. Cameron of Pennsylvania (who was chairman of the party national committee), John A. Logan of Illinois and Roscoe Conkling of New York, went to the convention in Chicago with slightly more than 300 delegates out of 375 necessary to nominate.

If able to enforce the unit rule, whereby the big delegations of Pennsylvania, New York and Illinois could be voted solidly for the general in accord with the wishes of the majority of those delegations, the Grant managers were assured of some sixty more votes, that would have brought their favorite almost within reach of the prize. But their plan to have the unit rule maintained went to smash in the convention and the oratory and poor leadership of James A. Garfield of Ohio—the orphan canal boy who became a college president, a general in the Civil war, and a member of congress from his state—were largely what defeated the unit rule strategy of the Grant stalwarts, as they came to be called.

Grant was put in nomination by Conkling in one of the most famous speeches of convention history, beginning with the stanza of verse:

"And when asked what state he hailed from,
Our sole reply shall be—
He comes from Appomattox,
And its famous apple tree."

As the storm of applause for Grant's nomination died away, it was Garfield's task skillfully to present the nomination of Secretary of the Treasury John Sherman as Ohio's favorite son, which he did in masterly fashion—though the actual effect of the speech was to heighten appreciation of Garfield's own availability as a possible dark horse. He got only one of two votes in the early balloting, however.

Then on the thirty-fourth ballot Garfield's total took a spurt when Wisconsin threw her entire 10 votes to him, and they were recorded despite his own strenuous protestations that he was not a candidate. On the thirty-sixth ballot, although the Grant total of 206 held firm, 336 votes went to Garfield in a general stampede. Apparently stunned with surprise, he was acclaimed the winner.

To placate the defeated Grant faction, Chester A. Arthur of New York, by no means a conspicuous figure nationally, was named for the vice presidency, from which position he was destined to ascend to the Presidency upon Garfield's assassination by a disappointed office-seeker.

When the Democratic convention met at Cincinnati the contest was a wide open one among a score of aspirants. But the pre-eminence of Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock soon asserted itself. As the Wisconsin Republican delegation had started the stampede to Garfield, so it was the Wisconsin Democratic delegation that loosened a convention landslide to Hancock. Numerous other state delegations changed their votes after the second ballot and he was declared the nominee.

Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun cynically dismissed Hancock as "a good man weighing 250 pounds." His worth was weighable in more than avoirdupois, however. Hancock's generalship in the Civil war made him, as one historian has put it, "the knightliest figure of all the hosts which the North sent forth in battle," and Grant hailed him as his ablest corps commander.

The contest had an extremely close finish. Out of a total popular vote of 2,000,000, the division was so nearly equal that fewer than 10,000 votes separated Garfield and Hancock in the popular count. These votes were so distributed among the states, however, that Garfield had 214 and Hancock 155 in the electoral college.

Hog Imported Animal

There were no true hogs in America until they were brought over by Europeans. The animals native to America which most resemble the domestic hog are the peccaries, which are pig-like mammals found from Texas to Paraguay. Apparently the peccary was never domesticated by the aborigines of America—Exchange.

New Fashions for Season of SportsTogs Are Designed for Practically but Retain All Smartness.

The season of winter sports finds designers with complete outfits of exceptional smartness, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Costumes are distinct from the generally accepted sports suits of other seasons, which is repeated in countless variations for every occasion and in many materials. Skating has always furnished inspiration for dressmakers, and picturesque suits for skaters have been among the most attractive models of the season, changing only to conform to the prevailing mode. Designers are amused themselves with delightfully original styles. These are all simpler and more practical than the fashioned rather theatrical skating costume in which the last word of chic was expressed in the bands of that trimmed the tight little coat, the skirt bottom and the boot tops—like little costumes with a certain feminine charm that is still felt in it is found in Godey's Lady's Book. But it would never survive among the sports styles of the present day, equally attractive but different.

The up-to-date skating suit is flared, almost scientifically practical, and yet exceedingly smart. In a large assortment of sports suits models from almost every prominent or aspiring house in Paris and New York. One from Rodier is a three-piece ensemble consisting of a knicker and jersey coat sweater. It has three points illustrating the most popular design of the season: Skirt with plaits clustered in front to give freedom of movement; knickers fitting closely and meeting at long woolen stockings; and a sweater of heavy wool jersey with high turtle-neck collar, with sleeves drawn tight at the wrists with knitted ribbed cuffs.

Another skintight dress, this time of American authorship, is likewise feminine and more of the sort that might be worn in the spectators' gallery at winter sports events, or almost anywhere in the wintry countryside. It is made of a Rodier tweed mixture, with a skirt plaited in simple folds and a sweater-coat of the same material cut more than hip length and buttoned all the way down the front. This sweater is warm and comfortable, has side pockets and is belted with a band of plain brown cloth along the edges of the coat front, pockets and cuffs, the sweater being of beige wool. The hat of beige felt has a band of brown ribbed wool around the crown, and beige knitted wool stockings are worn with riding boots of brown buckskin. This conventional skating suit is shown in many different combinations of color, some startlingly gay, others in light colors.

White is very fashionable in all of the winter sports suits, particularly in skating costumes, always of pure, with green, yellow, scarlet or other contrasting colors. In the early jerseys are shown some beautiful suits of white, with stripes of color around the bottom of the jersey, the skirt and at the neck and wrists. These decorative borders are of green and black, yellow and black, blue, scarlet and of black and white, very effective and stylish. In all the skaters are wearing.

Increasing variations are introduced to give novelty to the new fashions. The latest sweaters are especially important, one model being in reality a double garment. It is illustrated in an extreme style designed in Paris and it is made in two shades of brown with light cocoa tan. Over a close-fitting jersey sweater of the tan is worn a sleeveless sweater-coat that covers the hips and is low at the neck, back and front to show the high turtle collar of the under part. A skating garment that suggests the old styles has a skirt of white flannel laid in box plaits, sweater of coral tinted jersey kasha and double-breasted short coat of the white material with dark fox fur at the high neck and cuffs. Another skating costume is made with brown jersey for the skirt, gathered full across the front, and one of the new sleeveless jumpers of brown over a close, high-collared jersey of yellow wool in which are interwoven small figures in red. A red lacquered belt and boots with red lacquered tops add a brilliant touch to the ensemble. Brown gauntlet do-skin gloves are worn.

Skating Costumes. Ski devotees are making the most exacting demand upon the designers of dress for winter sports. Only confirmed sports devotees go in for the pastime and their costume must be correct and distinctive, with less attention given to the quality of becomingness, which is dimmed by the thrill and hazard of the sport. From Scandinavia comes the inspiration of an ultra smart skiing suit which is made of a hunter's green cloth, with a beret of scarlet suede. The coat is cut like the jacket of an aviator, but buttoned to the coat, belted and flaring wide over the hips with large patch side pockets. The long breeches are tucked into wool socks knitted in lattice of scarlet and white and a pair of the fashionable white do-skin gloves are pulled on over the sleeves.

From Norway comes the model for another suit. It is in blue, gray and white, with the regulation long breeches and boots faced over wool socks. The overjacket of blue is cut like a French gilet, with deep open neck and arm holes, and it is worn over a jersey of knitted white yarn with full length sleeves and a heavy red collar of the knitted wool, high at the back and open for several inches in front.

Sportswomen who prefer the skirt model with every costume have some charming designs with which to vary their dress for skiing. One is an engaging suit in king blue and white. A skirt of inverted box plaits is made of white wool with bands of blue cloth about the hips and at the bottom. The heavy white wool sweater is made hip length, with a high double roll collar, and is worn under a slip-on sleeveless cardigan jacket of blue, belted around the hips and with side patch pockets.

Some picturesque suits not easily distinguished as belonging to any special sport are made by the various Parisian designers for the San Moritz season.

Lively Colors Favored. Color is given especial attention in the winter sports costumes, and some creators are using the modernist patterns with picturesque effect. Yellow is very fashionable and is combined with other colors in a number of suits. Among these decorative creations are the chic frocks, wraps and suits seen in the spectators' gallery or at the winter clubs built where tobogganing, skiing and skating devotees gather for luncheon and tea. In these costumes the Rodier wools and Scotch materials are having conspicuous success and considerable for is used, though less than formerly. Jane Regu's things are among the most popular with chic sportswomen who are wearing suits and coats. One model is in winter green, shading from pale to dark and interwoven in a knee length sweater coat, with plaited skirt of dark green crepe de chine.

India's Metropolis

The Hindu of "Calcutta" is "Kailashgutta." "Kail" is the name of an Indian goddess to whom a temple has been erected in Calcutta. "Gutta" is the Hindu for "abai," or "landing place." "Kailashgutta" means, therefore, "landing place of Kail."

Of the death of Dr. Malmgren as reported to her by Captain Zappi—Recounts Her Son's Compassion.

Dr. Malmgren, 54 years of age, was the mother of Dr. Eric Malmgren, who was killed in the crash of the dirigible Italia, called on Malmgren to give her son's remains to her. With her son-in-law translated, the conversation was carried on between the Swedish scientist in Sweden.

At a statement the son-in-law made, Captain Zappi said: "The Malmgren was not in good luck when he set out and soon realized that his strength was going to him. One day, I believe it was the twelfth of June, the doctor asked me as the only service I would do him was to dig a trench in the snow and lay the compass which was a presentation for his work with the expedition of 1922-23."

At this point the captain handed the compass to Mrs. Malmgren, saying: "You know him. All we could do was to bury him. He was like that."

Mrs. Malmgren was later quoted by her son-in-law as saying: "The object of Captain Zappi's call has been attained. I feel perfectly calm. I believe absolutely that Captain Zappi is telling me the truth."

Captain Zappi also said: "Dr. Malmgren and I were the best of friends. We were like brothers. I have been very much pained by what has been said about me, but I have a clear conscience before God. Dr. Malmgren kept no notes, at least after the disaster."

Here Mrs. Malmgren interrupted Captain Zappi's story with the exclamation: "I understand—it was not his habit."

Captain Zappi, speaking of statements made by the Russian aviator Chukhnovskiy, who discovered a Zappi and Mariano on the ice, that a third figure was nearby, told Mrs. Malmgren that what the flyer saw must have been a pair of leather breeches which had been thrown away.

The son-in-law, Mrs. Malmgren said he was fully satisfied with the captain's story. He said he knew the doctor's strength of character and was convinced that his last moments were as Zappi related. He added: "Captain Zappi is a perfect gentleman whose story gives a clear idea of what happened."

Zappi was accompanied on his call by the Italian consul general. After the interview he rejoined the other survivors of the Italia. They were traveling today toward Rome on the regular express from Copenhagen to Germany.

ONE FORM OF DRUG HABIT

A monthly Medical Bulletin of a well-dressed, intelligent-looking man of middle age came into a drug store and addressing the soda water clerk said "Gimme something for a headache." The clerk poured him out a liquid which he drank without further word or question. Now what the soda water clerk had given him was a powerful coal tar drug that would not only stop his headache, but has stopped the heart itself in a great many cases.

"It cures a headache by hitting the nerves such a tremendous blow that for a time they fail to register pain or anything else."

Now pain is pain, and no one can be blamed for trying to get relief from it, but a drug that can knock a headache "cold" can only do so by knocking the entire nervous system "cold," and Nature demands reparation for such treatment.

Now just as high temperature is a symptom, a high pulse rate a symptom, low or high blood pressure simply symptoms, so also is a headache only a symptom of trouble, or as this writer graphically puts it, "headache is merely a symptom, a red flag frantically waved by old mother Nature. It tells us plainly as possible that somewhere in the internal regions something is going wrong."

In a former article I spoke of twenty causes of headache, but there are likely more of which I didn't think or know.

It doesn't look like good sense therefore, to take a powerful drug to stop or cure the headache without any endeavor to find out the cause. While this writer had in mind that taking powerful drugs might quite readily cause a "drug habit," my thought is that the common sense thing to do would be to try and find out the cause of the pain. If you have the headache once, you are quite likely to have it again; therefore a little investigation on your part with the help of the family doctor should enable you to locate the cause and so prevent this type of headache in future days, to say nothing about the damage and danger of any drug habit being formed.

GAUDY BEACHES

People who think American bathing beaches are gay and daring would have their eyes opened by a tour of European water resorts. It isn't so much the scantiness of costume as the color and style. Men as well as women share in the startling innovations.

At some beaches, a writer in Liberty Magazine reports, the men wear blazers that outlast the giddy parasols and awnings, and the women wear about everything from many-colored chiffon to suits of birch bark with headresses lighting them up like gorgeous tropical birds. "At some beaches anything goes, and it is here that sensational and freakish bathing clothes—such as beaded bathing suits and those made of feathers—appear and are broadcast to the world in general. The Lido is considered to pajamas."

Most of these costumes, it may be assumed, are not meant to bathe in. They doubtless serve a useful purpose in brightening up the beach, and gaudiness as well as sunbathing have their wholesome uses. They wouldn't be any harm in brightening up our own beaches a little more.

24.—First Joust of the "Plumed Knight"

IF ORATORY alone could have won a nomination for a popular idol, Blaine would have been elected long ago. He is a man of words, and his words have won him a reputation as the "Plumed Knight" of the Republican party.

Colonel Ingersoll was the peacemaker of the time. Blaine was just coming to be the popular leader of the Republican party. A scathing attack he had made upon Jefferson Davis a short time before the Congress had seemed to stir up the old Civil War feeling in the North and made him inevitably the leading aspirant for preferment of those in his party who were aroused by waving of the "bloody shirt."

But while he had stirred the North with his assault on Davis, Blaine also had fallen under a shadow. The notorious Mulligan letters showing him to have been involved in questionable relations with railroad stock manipulators while speaker of the house of representatives had just been made public. Mulligan was about to put the letters into testimony before a congressional investigation committee when Blaine, learning of his possession of them, went to Mulligan's hotel, begged insistently to be shown the letters, and having got them in his possession, refused to give them back.

"Then, while public opinion was beginning to rise against him at report of this action, he read the whole sheet of them, in a dramatic hour before the house of representatives. The coup was a sensational one. At first it tended to vindicate him, and served to do so fully with many of his admirers. But others read the contents more closely and found their idol tarnished.

A week before the national Republican convention, that he hoped would nominate him, Blaine collapsed in the hot sun on his way to church. He remained unconscious and helpless in his home for two days, while anxiety of his friends mounted and the telegraph wires even began to carry rumors of his death. Then on Tuesday afternoon he regained command of his senses, and almost his first conscious act was to wire his friends at Cincinnati that he was "entirely convalescent."

But the combination of circumstances left Ingersoll with a hard task in his nomination speech to minimize Blaine's connection with the railroad scandals and his ill health, and to center attention upon his fiery attitude toward the late Southern Confederates.

Ingersoll's great peroration is historic. "Like an armed warrior," he cried, "like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of every traitor to his country and every maligner of his fair reputation. For the Republican party to desert that gallant man now is as though an army should desert their general upon the field of battle."

Ingersoll's eloquence powerfully swayed the convention. He seemed to have enthralled the gathering with his glowing periods of praise. Had the convention balloted then, there is little doubt but that Blaine would have been nominated forthwith.

But "the gathering shades of evening" made adjournment to the next day necessary after the nominating speeches had been delivered. That adjournment was fatal to the chances of the ill-fated Republican idol who was destined to try repeatedly to gain the Presidency and always to fall to win it.

Overnight the psychological effects of Ingersoll's marvelous eloquence were off. Blaine led in the early halting next day, but did not command a majority. Rutherford B. Hayes, Ohio dark horse, who stood fifth on the first ballot, was put across, with five more votes than a majority, on the seventh ballot after Michigan had begun to stampede in his direction on the fifth ballot.

Ingersoll's eloquence had been in vain. But he had given a popular title to the strong leader of his party. From that time onward to his death Blaine was known among Republicans as the "plumed knight."

Wouldn't Do
Grandma and grandpa had reared a large family and it was a source of great pleasure to them to have their grandchildren for week-end and vacation visits. On one occasion at the dinner table grandma made mention of the fact that she had read in the News that grandpa was to preside as toastmaster at a banquet. Little Mary seemed pleased and rather somewhat doubtful. Finally recovering herself, she said: "Why, grandpa, that won't do, because grandpa always burns the toast."

In Memoriam.
In sad and loving memory of a dear wife, daughter and sister, who died July 30, 1927. Mrs. Edward Frager.
Oh why was she taken so young and so fair.
When earth had so many it better could spare.
Hard, hard was the blow that compelled us to part.
From the loved one so near and so dear to our hearts.
Gone from among us, oh how we miss her.
Loving her dearly her memory we'll keep.
Never till life ends will we ever forget her.
Near to our hearts is the place where she sleeps.
May her soul rest in peace.
Signed,
HUSBAND, MOTHER, AND SISTERS.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 29. —Higher call money rates checked a brisk rally in today's stock market. Under the stimulus of poor operations and expanding public participation, prices were marked up 1 to nearly 2 points during the morning. But many of the gains were cut down or canceled by early afternoon.

Call money received unchanged at 10 per cent but advanced to 11 when banks called about $7,000,000 in loans in preparation for heavy month-end settlements. Trading turned dull in the decline, indicating the absence of any extensive forced liquidation.

Except for the publication of a few favorable semi-annual earnings there was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. Chrysler and Dodge brothers issues showed special strength on indications that the merger plan would be approved, although Dodge stockholders were still in session at Baltimore without having announced a decision early this afternoon.

National Tea, American Machine & Foundry and Midland Steel products preferred, all up 7 points or more, were in the vanguard of the early advance. Montgomery Ward closed 1/2 to a new peak on predictions of record breaking July sales. Eastman Kodak moved into new high ground on buying influenced by the successful demonstration of the new amateur motion picture film in color.

On the reaction, Wright fell from 153 1/2 to 153 and Radio from 179 to 175. American International, American Smelting and Woolworth yielded 2 points or more below Saturday's finals.

A better demand was apparent for the investment rails, Delaware and Hudson climbing six points and Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1/2.

Professor Arthur H. Snyder died on Sunday morning, July 29, at his home on John street after a short but painful illness. In the death of Mr. Snyder, Kingston and vicinity has lost a man who for many years has stood for the best in music and has started literally hundreds of music students, both vocal and instrumental, upon more or less notable musical careers. Not only did Prof. Snyder teach with the idea of making performers out of his pupils, but quite in advance of his times he added facts from the history of great masters as well as careful interpretation of the music of the great masters which started his music students on the further quest of appreciation of music, the great musical ideal sought today. While a pleasing tenor soloist and pianist, Prof. Snyder was a real student of the pipe organ and a skilled performer. For many years he was organist at the Fair Street Reformed Church, leaving there to become organist at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church under the pastorate of the late Dean Sweeney, after whose death Mr. Snyder played for a short time at Trinity M. E. church and for a longer period as organist of St. James M. E. church. About this time Mr. and Mrs. Snyder moved to Binghamton where Mr. Snyder was organist of the First Presbyterian church. Later he was organist for some time of the First Reformed church in Poughkeepsie, since which time he has admirably filled the position of organist at both the Lutheran church of the Redeemer and the Clinton Avenue M. E. church, this city. For the past eight years Mr. Snyder has been organist and choir director of Trinity Episcopal church, Sagerties, a position which he filled at the time of his death. Mr. Snyder was a lover of the beautiful art and literature as well as in music and an ardent lover of nature, remembering from his boyhood where the most beautiful wild flowers were to be found throughout the season of bloom hereabouts. And this love of beauty Mr. Snyder made every effort to share with his pupils who count among their number many of the most noted vocalists and organists as well as piano teachers in and about Kingston. Devoted to a marked degree to his home, Mr. Snyder was an ideal husband and host. A strong Christian character, quiet and unassuming, a man of culture and possessed of the kindest of humor, Prof. Snyder had a wide circle of friends in addition to the almost countless young people who being his pupils were thereafter his friends. Besides his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Beebe, also a musician, Mr. Snyder is survived by two half brothers, Charles V. and William S. Hogan, both of this city. The funeral services will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock from his late residence, No. 55 John street, with interment in Montrose cemetery.

Only Known to Be Old

There are no authentic data regarding the origin of the game of croquet, which was a favorite of kings some 200 years ago. Some writers say that it was evolved from the game pall-mall, which was played in Langue doc as early as the Thirteenth century.

Old Monetary Term

Merchandise money was silver money, said to have been first coined in China about 253 B. C., and bearing the inscription "Merchandise money (Ho) of the second metal, circulating in the general capital."

Imaginary Stone

The philosopher's stone was an imaginary substance which the ancient alchemists thought would convert all base metals into gold. Hence a person looking for a short cut to riches is said to be searching for the philosopher's stone.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Visiting Violinist Plays at Maverick

Boris Koutzen and Wife of Philadelphia Entertain a Large Maverick Audience Sunday—Heavy White Envelopes Quietness.

At the Maverick on Sunday afternoon a large audience composed of Kingstonians, Sagerties and Westport folks, appeared Boris Koutzen and wife Inez Koutzen of Philadelphia as newcomers at the Maverick. Koutzen plays violin with the Philadelphia orchestra, his wife a niece of Horace Britt, cellist at the Maverick with whom they are visiting.

The first part of the program was from Bocherini, a quartet arrangement for two violins, viola and two cellos; the musicians in the order of the instruments named were Boris Koutzen, Gerald Kunz, Henri Koutzen, Gerald Kunz, Henri Koutzen, Paul Kiefer and Horace Britt. These musicians played three movements from Bocherini, the third one which on July 1 was so many changes, a catchy variation of airs with Britt's cello doing some stage tricks to the evident delight of certain members of the audience.

The second part of the program was Boris Koutzen in violin solos, accompanied by Inez Koutzen at the piano "La Folie," by Corelli, was rendered with a practiced technique. It was a selection having much form from Chausson, a "poem" of the soloist ample opportunity to display a rather emotional nature, and the pianist showed herself a musician of the first water, a perfect accompanist. The audience enjoyed the family of entertainers as was evident by two encores which the Koutzens gave, both delightful selections.

Boris Koutzen was a typical violinist; he has jet black hair, a pale complexion, in certain passages he threw his whole body into his work; on the stage he was impatient with a child in the audience who made some noise until Hervey White was forced to make absolute quietness; he played twinkling notes on a high treble string with emotions making a trio instead of a duo arrangement. Certainly it seemed that Boris Koutzen given a bit of maturity, will make a virtuoso with his violin.

Notes About Fashions for Women Who Care

The youngest and freshest of evening frocks are made of tulle in all the pastel shades that are becoming to young girls. Cherry red or chartreuse yellow in moire taffeta fashions a smart new evening cape with a frilled collar and tie ends.

An evening cap is made of pale green velvet petals with a cluster of dainty crystal flowers in yellow, orchid and dark green on one side.

Pumps and strap shoes of dark blue leather are extremely popular, and they are even more attractive when worn with a bag of the same leather.

Very charming is a combination, extremely brief in length, which is very finely plaited from neck to hem. The hem, by the way, is in deep scallops, and for decoration there is a tiny sash of the silk.

A huge hat of pale beige straw has the unusual trimming of a braided band of four velvet ribbons—blue, green, rose, and white, which form a rope around the crown. The long ends hang over the side in a graceful cluster.

There is a great demand for the wide taffeta ribbons in the popular shades and the supple satin ribbons also are popular, as well as the grosgrains. The velvet ribbons seem likely to decorate many of the summer hats.

It seems almost impossible to think that anything new could be originated in printed silk frocks, but that very thing has been achieved in a dress of printed chiffon, which has a long coat of empire drape in the same pattern.

Equally lovely is lingerie of mauve-colored crepe de chine, trimmed with real lace of the same lovely tint and embroidered consisting of tiny flowers of violet silk set in with hemstitching. Small bows of violet ribbon further accent the color scheme.

Perhaps you have wondered whether you could beautifully wear that so-called "difficult" shade—chartreuse green. Combined with the right contrasting color a new chartreuse called creuse is becoming to almost any woman. It is very smartly combined with navy blue, chambray-skin yellow, beige, pink, a dull, deep red or royal blue.

Rule for Enjoyment

We all want to enjoy ourselves. But the only successful way to do so is by making oneself into something that is enjoyable. Any other kind of self, no matter into what kind of pleasurable surroundings it may be born, will soon quench their brightness, as water quenches fire.—Exchange.

Mr. Snyder was a lover of the beautiful art and literature as well as in music and an ardent lover of nature, remembering from his boyhood where the most beautiful wild flowers were to be found throughout the season of bloom hereabouts. And this love of beauty Mr. Snyder made every effort to share with his pupils who count among their number many of the most noted vocalists and organists as well as piano teachers in and about Kingston. Devoted to a marked degree to his home, Mr. Snyder was an ideal husband and host. A strong Christian character, quiet and unassuming, a man of culture and possessed of the kindest of humor, Prof. Snyder had a wide circle of friends in addition to the almost countless young people who being his pupils were thereafter his friends. Besides his widow, who before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Beebe, also a musician, Mr. Snyder is survived by two half brothers, Charles V. and William S. Hogan, both of this city. The funeral services will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock from his late residence, No. 55 John street, with interment in Montrose cemetery.

Only Known to Be Old

There are no authentic data regarding the origin of the game of croquet, which was a favorite of kings some 200 years ago. Some writers say that it was evolved from the game pall-mall, which was played in Langue doc as early as the Thirteenth century.

Charles Lay, shortstop for the Pan-Am Baseball Club, lost control of his roadster while driving over a section of road under repair a short distance above Phoenixia on Sunday afternoon and his car ran into a telephone pole. Lay was cut under the eye but was able to take part in the ball game between the Pan-Am and the ball tossers of Fleischmanns. Miss Katherine Melville of Foxhall avenue, who was riding with him, was also cut about the face and was attended by a doctor at Fleischmanns. The car was damaged and was left at Phoenixia for repairs and later was brought back under its own power.

Notes About Fashions for Women Who Care

The youngest and freshest of evening frocks are made of tulle in all the pastel shades that are becoming to young girls. Cherry red or chartreuse yellow in moire taffeta fashions a smart new evening cape with a frilled collar and tie ends.

An evening cap is made of pale green velvet petals with a cluster of dainty crystal flowers in yellow, orchid and dark green on one side.

Pumps and strap shoes of dark blue leather are extremely popular, and they are even more attractive when worn with a bag of the same leather.

Very charming is a combination, extremely brief in length, which is very finely plaited from neck to hem. The hem, by the way, is in deep scallops, and for decoration there is a tiny sash of the silk.

A huge hat of pale beige straw has the unusual trimming of a braided band of four velvet ribbons—blue, green, rose, and white, which form a rope around the crown. The long ends hang over the side in a graceful cluster.

There is a great demand for the wide taffeta ribbons in the popular shades and the supple satin ribbons also are popular, as well as the grosgrains. The velvet ribbons seem likely to decorate many of the summer hats.

It seems almost impossible to think that anything new could be originated in printed silk frocks, but that very thing has been achieved in a dress of printed chiffon, which has a long coat of empire drape in the same pattern.

Equally lovely is lingerie of mauve-colored crepe de chine, trimmed with real lace of the same lovely tint and embroidered consisting of tiny flowers of violet silk set in with hemstitching. Small bows of violet ribbon further accent the color scheme.

Perhaps you have wondered whether you could beautifully wear that so-called "difficult" shade—chartreuse green. Combined with the right contrasting color a new chartreuse called creuse is becoming to almost any woman. It is very smartly combined with navy blue, chambray-skin yellow, beige, pink, a dull, deep red or royal blue.

ELEANOR GUNN ON FASHIONS

WOODEN HATS AND WOODEN TRIMMING EFFECTS ARE AMONG THE STARTLING INNOVATIONS FOR AUTUMN—COCOA IS WELCOMED AS A MEMBER OF THE CROWN FAMILY

New York.—Among the novel ideas under consideration for fall is the use of a new and remarkable product called coco, and made of aspen. It seems difficult to conceive of wood being used for such things as women's wear, except for incidental accessories, but coco has a much wider use than that, and is used for the body of hats as well as other things, the wood being shaved in thin strips, which may be woven or matted.

Spun glass, of course, has been in use for some time, so that the materials brought into play for costume purposes continue to be added to. Rayon also was quite unheralded and unusual a comparatively short time ago. Now this so-called artificial silk is extensively in use.

It is not, however, only the new things that have interest for us this season. There are all manner of old fabrics, sometimes rechristened and sometimes offered under familiar labels, that have an excellent chance for being elected to high places this fall.

Cheviot is on the slate for a strong revival, and some of the grande maisons, including Premet, find it a material worthy of their needles, not only for coats, but for suits and the inevitable ensemble. Of course, no one would dream of a world bereft of the ensemble. It is a type of costume that has come to stay.

Cocoa browns are being talked about, and in no way talked down. Of the enormous brown family, the cocoa branch seems to be most welcome in social circles. The cocoa shades, like others seemingly best fitted for sunny hours, are admitted under electric lights, it being quite the fad at the moment to wear street shades for evening.

INSECT SEASON

NOW HERE

Health Authorities Recommend Use of Fly-Tox for Security.

Science has proved conclusively that the fly is one of mankind's worst enemies. As a carrier of disease it has no equal. They transmit more than thirty different diseases, say eminent authorities.

FLY-TOX not only kills insects easily and quickly, but it has other desirable features as well. It will not stain. FLY-TOX is harmless to mankind and animals. It leaves a fleeting odor that is cleanly and fragrant.

This marvelous insecticide was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. It is a scientific product made to meet today's requirements in a household insecticide.

It is a clear, clean and pure liquid put up in bottles with the blue label. Many imitations are seeking to take advantage of popularity gained by FLY-TOX. Do not be misled. Demand the genuine FLY-TOX.—Adv.

Eleanor Gunn Says

New York.—Many of the newer and better models created for fall concentrate on the picturesque quality.

Long-haired fur, with fox leading, remains the expression of elegance—for evening wraps, at least.

Dark coats abundantly trimmed with light furs are the early fall preference.

Long white gloves are an interesting possibility, since they were worn at a recent appearance of the Russian Ballet in Paris.

Your slipper buckle or buttons must match your jewelry. This may be topaz, amethyst, crystal, or any of the gems now in vogue.

Red is again forging ahead, and is cited for many purposes, including sports wear.

Highly-colored tweeds and diagonal chevrons are fall candidates for favor, both with Chanel and Patou endorsement.

Combinations that involve a blending of blue and green win approval.

White lingerie is again becoming important to smart women.

Lido blue is one of the newer colors, and is liked for lingerie as well as outer things.

Hide Must Be Tanned

The American Chemical society says that if left untanned a hide, like the meat, decays. In the untanned state the fibers of the hide are glued or matted together. When tanned the strings or fibers are "individualized" so that they move separately without tearing apart. This process also swells or thickens the skin.

"Contract awarded to the lowest bidder—"

When a corporation wishes to build a factory ... when a city constructs a new subway ... whenever a large undertaking of that nature is planned, the first step is almost invariably a request for bids on the work. This practice of competitive bidding has saved millions of dollars. It assures the city or corporation of getting the best value for every dollar spent.

The same system can be applied to your own buying. And you can save a proportionate amount of money. How? Simply by consulting the advertising pages of this paper!

When you find yourself in need of a vacuum cleaner, a refrigerator, a pair of shoes, a new suit—anything—don't rush out and buy the first one offered you. Exercise the power of selection that the advertisements give you. Read about each one—what it will do, who makes it, what it costs. Then, when you find the one that best suits your needs and pocketbook, buy it! In this way you'll be spending your money wisely. You'll know what you're getting and how much it costs—before you buy it.

Every advertisement is the bid of some merchant for your trade; consider them carefully before buying.

When love fades ... whose fault?

Strange, what little things so often kill romance. Careless little things! Unconscious slips that creep in to mar treasured illusions. So unsuspected, the guilty one rarely guesses the truth ... until it is too late.

He won her ... but not until he learned to overcome "B. O."

(BODY ODOR)

AT FIRST, he alone was in love—she was coldly indifferent. He made all the advances—she merely tolerated him. At parties, she avoided him and devoted all her winsome charms to other men.

Naturally, he was bewildered. It hurt to think that the one girl he adored, didn't care for him.

Then one night a queer suspicion flashed across his mind. Body Odor—could that be the trouble? She was so dainty herself, she wouldn't be apt to excuse a fault like body odor. He'd have to be more careful—and make sure of himself.

He found out later that he guessed right about "B. O." They're engaged now. Of course, it took time to win her—"B. O." isn't easily forgiven.

Don't risk body odor!

Perhaps you're saying, "But I'm safe." Wait! Body odor is too treacherous a fault to take chances with.

We all have to perspire. Health demands it. Even on a cool day, our pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste. We can't detect this unpleasantness ourselves. Our sense of smell becomes deadened to it. But others always notice it.

America Leads Olympic, Nurmi Furnishes Thrill

John Sack of Kansas breaks world's record for 100 yards in 10.1 seconds. Nurmi comes second in 10.4 seconds. Sack's time is the fastest ever recorded for the distance. Nurmi's time is the fastest ever recorded for the distance.

By Alan J. Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor
Amsterdam, Holland, July 20 (AP).—If the opening day's performance is to be accepted as a criterion, the United States is headed for its ninth consecutive Olympic track and field triumph. On a similar basis, Paavo Nurmi is destined to remove any lingering doubt that he's the super-runner of all time.

On a day when the world's shot put record was broken by the American, John Kuck, of Kansas, in his first 52-foot performance of athletic history, it took another super-performer to capture the spotlight.

Kuck, with a toss that measured 51-1/2 feet, an inch beyond the high-also impregnable figure of 52 feet, furnished the opening day's sensation, but Nurmi provided the thrilling climax by coming from behind in the stretch to beat his ancient rival, Willie Ritola, Finnish-American ace, and outclass America's own Jole Ray, along with the rest of a big field to smash the Olympic record.

Many among the numerous Finns were singing swan songs for Paavo prior to the games. They wagged their heads knowingly, described how Nurmi's American invasion three years ago had burned him out and pointed out he had been beaten frequently within the past two years.

Nurmi still speedy. "Paavo," they said, "has lost the edge of his speed," but the peerless one had enough yesterday to stay with Ritola's killing pace all the way and then outrun ironman Willie in a spectacular stretch duel. If Nurmi had lost any of his speed, Ritola and Devin Wide, the Swedish schoolmaster, who cracked under yesterday's pace, would have to race the Finn when he has any more.

The only noticeable change in Paavo is that he's considerably bolder, looking much more mature than his 27 years. But the same funny little hop-skip is there when he practices, the same smooth, effortless stride when in action, the same characteristic arm swing and his famous stop-watch. He didn't inspect the time-piece as much as usual yesterday. After the first few laps he appeared satisfied that Ritola was setting a fast enough pace and followed without once challenging until the stretch when he passed Willie to win by four yards in 30 minutes, 15.4-5 seconds, four and four-fifths seconds under the mark Ritola set at Paris in 1924.

Kuck breaks record. Kuck's shotput victory, which sent the Stars and Stripes flying first on the Olympic center pole, fulfills the sensational promise of the blond Kansan's practice form. Yesterday, with Herman Brix, University of Washington husky, apparently assured of triumph with a toss of 51 feet, 8 inches, Kuck, on his next to last throw, hurled the ball to a new world's record, beating not only Brix but the German, Emil Hirschfeld, as well. Hirschfeld held the world's record for the shot-put officially just two days and made a fine effort to keep the crown by tossing the 16-pound ball 51 feet, 6 1/2 inches.

Bob King of Stanford takes his place among the first group crowned as Olympic champions, by virtue of his triumph in the high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 4 1/2 inches.

Three places in high jump. The United States took three places each in the high jump, where Ben Hedges, Jr., of the New York A. C., was second, and the defending champion, Harold Osborn, fifth, and in the shot-put, where Eric Krenz of Stanford, was fourth, but failed to score in the 10,000 meters. Ray was lapped by Nurmi and Ritola and made no effort to chase the flying Finns, being content to take a good workout for the Marathon. As it was, he finished twelfth. The other American entries, Mac Smith, of Yale, and Johnny Romig, Meadowbrook Club, Philadelphia, dropped out.

Meanwhile the Yankee sprint stars scored a clean sweep in their first and second 100-meter trials with the semi-finals and finals on today. Lloyd Hahan, Boston A. A. star, led the qualifying quarter in the 100-meter competition, which reaches the semi-finals today. F. Morgan Taylor, Illinois A. C. crack, and defending Olympic champion, looked as a strong favorite to retain his 400-meter hurdle crown after the unexpected elimination of Johnny Gibson, Bloomfield Lyceum, and Bob Maxwell, Los Angeles A. C.

Tagging Major League Bases

By Herbert W. Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer
Something has struck the second Yankee craft, bow stern and amidships. She's still afloat but leaking badly and may go down at any time.

A month ago the champions were leading the American League procession by more than a dozen games. Today that lead had dwindled to six and a half games. Taking heart at this unexpected collapse upon the part of the haughty New Yorkers, Connie Mack has pushed his Philadelphia Athletics along at a whirlwind pace and again has hopes of realizing his long-deferred ambition of piloting another league pennant winner.

At Cleveland yesterday, the Yankees suffered the most humiliating defeat they have taken since 1905 when they ended the season in seventh place. They were annihilated by the Cleveland Indians, 24 to 6, in the widest major league game of the year.

The Indians started out with eight runs in the first inning, decided that wouldn't be enough and scored nine more in the second. By this time the Tribe was more tired running bases than the Yankees were chasing singles that hopped all over the lot. One run was the best the Indians could do in the third and they waited until the sixth inning to score the last six.

As near as could be determined, the pitching victims were, in order, George Pipiras, Willy Moore, Myles Thomas, Henry Johnson and Archie Campbell. For some reason or other Miller Huggins didn't pitch nor did the call Babe Ruth to the mound either in an attempt to stop the carnage. The Indians pounded out 27 hits and batted around twice in each of the first two innings. It was on June 17, 1925, that the Yankees last were defeated by an 18-run margin. The Detroit Tigers turned the trick by a score of 19 to 1.

While all this was going on, the Athletics were chalking up another win at St. Louis, taking over the Browns for the seventh straight time, 8 to 3. The Browns dropped five straight at Philadelphia at the end of their recent eastern invasion.

George Earnshaw was wild but effective enough to down the Browns behind heavy batting by his teammates, particularly Jimmy Fox, who pounded out a home run, a double and a single and drove in four runs. After losing six in a row, the Boston Red Sox plied into Lil Stoner for four runs in the second inning, enough to beat the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 2.

After losing their seventh straight contest in the first game, the Chicago White Sox came back to beat the Washington Senators in the last half of a double bill. Ted Lyons was ineffective in the opener and the Senators pounded out an 8 to 3 victory. Adkins was in form in the nightcap and the Sox ended their long string of reverses with a 5 to 1 triumph.

In the National League, the Cincinnati Reds strengthened their hold on second place by turning back the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6 to 5. Zitzmann's fourth hit of the game scoring Jackie May with the winning run in the ninth.

The New York Giants and Chicago Cubs fought each other to a standstill in a double bill at the Polo Grounds. The Giants took the first game, 4 to 3, in ten innings. Larry Benton gaining his 17th victory of the year. Guy Bush outpitched Vic Aldridge in the nightcap and the Cubs came out on the long end of a 3 to 1 score.

Rondouts Won From Koenigs

The Rondouts A. C. triumphed over the Koenigs A. C. 11 to 4, at Brook Park Sunday afternoon. Bill Koenigs batted the contest for the Rondouts in the eighth inning by striking a long one to centerfield, which was good for three bases and scored three runners. The win was the fourth in seven starts for the Rondouts.

The six went four innings before the Koenigs scored. Krom of the Rondouts was the only man to get a hit before the fourth. It was registered in the second and was good for two runs, but that was all. Subbot and Leskie batted safely in the fourth, while Lewis and Williams singled to give the Koenigs the first run of the game. In the last half of the same inning the Rondouts got one. Barney scored on a single to center by Phil "Waco" Peters.

The Koenigs raised their standing by two runs in the fifth stanza. Komosa went to first on an error, two of which were credited to the Rondouts. Subbot singled and a two-base hit by Leskie scored the two. The Rondouts scored one more run in the fifth. Stump crossed the rubber when Dulin and Crispell singled.

Scoring ceased until the last of the eighth when the Brook Park squad added a quartet of runs to the two they had collected. Dulin singled and advanced on a double by Crispell. Krom's single scored Dulin. Then up stepped "Molly" Leonard, who sent the ball to centerfield for a triple. The three runners on the bases trotted across home plate, which gave the tilt to the Rondouts. The score:

Poor Fielding Loses for Pan-Ams

Displaying the worst fielding of the season the Pan-Am baseball club dropped a contest to the Fleischmanns team on the mountain community diamond Sunday afternoon. The score at the end of the tilt stood 19-2 with the oilmen on the small end.

While the Pan-Ams made 10 errors behind the hurling of Carpenter, Dewey Van Buren, was well supported by the Fleischmanns team. He was in good shape and likely would have been successful regardless of the Pan-Am errors. He completely baffled the oilmen with his slants with the exception of his opponent on the mound, Carpenter. This Pan-Am player touched him for three hits.

Says Tunney Will Retire

New York Times Quotes Gibson as Saying Champion Will Retire—World Declares Tunney Plans Year Abroad Studying Philosophy.
New York, July 20 (AP).—The New York World today says that Gene Tunney, according to one of his closest friends, plans to spend a year abroad studying philosophy, after which he will take up a career of banking or industrial business.

His philosophical studies, it is said, will take him to such universities as King's College, London, and perhaps the University of Heidelberg. He may even enroll in as many as four universities before he returns to this country and casts his lot in a business venture.

Whether this business will be banking or industry, according to this friend, has not been decided. But Tunney, this friend said, has received substantial offers in each field and will surely take up one or the other.

There is only one stipulation, according to the World's informant. That is that the business which calls Tunney from the ring must be creative. The champion, it was remarked, therefore will not consider buying a seat on the Stock Exchange or becoming a broker.

The New York Times today quotes Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, as saying that Tunney is through with boxing and will announce his retirement. Gibson also is retiring, after 25 years as promoter, matchmaker and manager of boxers.

Samuel F. Pryor, Jr., of Greenwich Conn., close friend of Tunney, told the Times regarding the champion: "He is sick of the boxing game and he has achieved what he set out to do in it, namely, to make some money. He also hopes that his participation in boxing has done something toward bettering the game."

"As for Tunney's marriage, there is no thought of that, so far as I know. He has been reported engaged several times, I know, but there has never been anything in the reports. There is no particular girl now. He is a normal young fellow, of course, and he goes about with girls a little, but there is no thought of matrimony."

Yellow Jackets To Meet Tuesday

A meeting of the Yellow Jackets, Kingston's professional football team, which has a splendid record of previous performances, will be held at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. The meeting will be for the purpose of making plans for the coming season.

It is expected that the meeting in the "Y" will be largely attended by those who have represented the Yellow Jackets. When the season terminates last year the players expressed intentions of carrying on this season, so the early meeting will be held to promote a flashy start.
